This event gives you an opportunity to discuss and debate new developments in vaccines for major infectious diseases and to learn about how the immune system responds to infection. This will be a chance to engage with scientists, clinicians and research students to learn about the impact this research has on society and to hear about different career paths in science.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Time</th>
<th>Event</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>9.30am</td>
<td>Registration (tea, coffee)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
| 10.00am | Introduction to Immunity and Infection
Prof Paul Klenerman, University of Oxford |
| 10.30am | Transmission Blocking Malaria Vaccines
Dr Sumi Biswas            |
| 11.00am | An overview of vaccine clinical trials for major infectious diseases
Prof Adrian Hill          |
| 11.30am - 1pm | Lunch, careers advice, Meet the Scientist,
DNA origami etc. Exhibitors and hands on activities |
| 1.00pm  | Vaccines for Tuberculosis
Prof Helen McShane         |
| 1.30pm  | Meningitis - why are teenagers at risk?
Dr Matthew Snape            |
| 2.00pm  | GUEST LECTURE
Professor Peter Piot – Director of the LSHTM,
Professor of Public Health, co-discoverer of the Ebola virus |
| 2.45pm - 3.30pm | Panel Discussion/Debate |

WHAT IS IT ABOUT?
An interactive day for anyone who wants to find out about the immune system, vaccines and infectious diseases. Talks from experts, hands on activities, debate and questions.

WHO IS IT FOR?
The FREE event is suitable for GCSE and A-Level students and anyone with an interest in learning more about immunity and disease prevention.

WANT TO COME ALONG?
Register online at www.bsgct.org or contact us at office@bsgct.org
Places limited, so don’t delay!